Short videos refer to brief video clips typically ranging from a few seconds to a few minutes in length. These videos are created and shared on various social media platforms and apps, such as TikTok, Instagram Reels, Snapchat, and Vine (in the past). Short videos often feature a wide range of content, including entertainment, comedy, music, dance, tutorials, challenges, storytelling, news, and much more. Short videos have gained significant popularity due to their concise and easily consumable format, allowing users to quickly engage with content and share their own creations. They are designed to capture attention quickly and deliver engaging and entertaining content in a short span of time. Short videos are often characterized by their visual storytelling, creative editing techniques, catchy music, and the ability to quickly convey messages or evoke emotions. These videos are created by individuals, influencers, and content creators using smartphones or other devices with video recording capabilities. They can be filmed in various settings, ranging from everyday life situations to staged performances. Short videos are typically shared on social media platforms, where users can like, comment on, and share them with their followers or the wider public. Short videos have not only transformed the way people consume and produce media content but have also revolutionized social dynamics and communication patterns. They have become a prominent form of self-expression, enabling users to showcase their talents, creativity, and perspectives. With their widespread popularity and influence, short videos have emerged as a cultural phenomenon that has impacted various aspects of society, including entertainment, communication, social interaction, cultural expression, and even marketing and advertising strategies.
